

Aimee Voth Siebert

Disaster Behavioral Health and Inclusion Program Manager
Colorado Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Management, Office of Emergency Preparedness and Response (OEPR).

Aimee Voth Siebert is the Disaster Behavioral Health and Inclusion Program Manager for CDPHE's Office of Emergency Preparedness and Response (OEPR). Aimee holds a Master's degree in International Disaster Psychology from the University of Denver and has grown multi-disciplinary emergency knowledge and experience in both domestic and international settings.

Aimee has worked with OEPR since May 2012 and has supported Colorado's responses to wildfires, floods, shootings, and the COVID-19 response. In October 2017, she led a Colorado disaster mental health team to support Puerto Rico's response to Hurricane Maria. In 2015, she deployed with CDC's Ebola Response in Sierra Leone as a Health Promotion Specialist.

Aimee promotes a people-centered and adaptive functioning lens for emergency planning and response. Aimee contributes leadership to the development of Colorado's Access & Functional Needs Program, offers training in disaster behavioral health, access & functional needs, community inclusion, and crisis communications.

The Community Inclusion in Colorado (CICO) program has gained recognition around the country. In 2015, the CICO mapping project (bit.ly/communityinclusionmaps) was recognized as a "promising practice" for Emergency Management Inclusive of People with Disabilities by FEMA and the ADA National Network.

Aimee's community inclusion work in emergency preparedness and response was awarded CDPHE's Health Equity and Environmental Justice Award in 2017. She has also been recognized with the "Service and Leadership" pin by the DU's Graduate School of Professional Psychology.
