

Alex Ghenis

Deputy Director
Sustain Our Abilities

Alex Ghenis is the Deputy Director of Sustain Our Abilities, a nonprofit focused on the intersection of climate change, health, and disability. Alex acquired a spinal cord injury in his teens and went on to receive a BA in Geography and MPP from UC Berkeley, where he learned about climate change and became ingrained in Berkeley's disability rights community. He has built his career around disability climate justice, focusing on topics including disaster readiness, resilient and accessible urban design, equitable clean transportation, and disability rights in climate migration. In addition to his work at SOA, Alex is the disability SME for California's Functional Assessment Service Teams and a contributor to New Mobility Magazine.
